Walitj Meil Walk Trail

Approximately 50km from Albany in the Australian Natural Heritage-listed Porongurup National Park, the Walitj Meil Walk is a 1km easy to moderate loop walk. Start from the Castle Rock day-use area and follow the trail markers along the edge of the karri/marri/yate forest to a scenic view across to the Stirling Range National Park.

From the viewing point, enter the karri forest and return to the picnic area following the trail through the forest, all the while learning about the local plants and animals, colonial history, as well as Noongar culture.

The Walitj Meil Walk Trail is a Friends of the Porongurup Range initiative and was funded through the Australian Government's Community and Heritage Icons Grant, in liaison with the local Noongar community and in partnership with Department of Biodiversity, Conservation and Attractions' (DBCA) Parks and Wildlife Service.

The Walitj Meil Walk Trail is a Class 3 walk trail, indicating it is a moderate walk trail with clear directional signage. You may encounter minor natural hazards such as short steep sections; steps; shallow water crossings and unstable or slippery surfaces. A good level of fitness is recommended.

Wedge-tailed eagle trail marker

The trail marker of the Walitj Meil Walk Trail is the wedge-tailed eagle, which is a symbol of strength, beauty and inspiration to the traditional owners of the area. The bird is a significant totem for the Noongar of the south-west, who believe it shows the way to see clearly, take on challenges and overcome obstacles with courage, grace and style. It soars above the earth, offering a unique perspective on country, and glides effortlessly through the sky, reminding us to rise above the struggle and let the spirit take flight.
